Abstracta Iranica

Revue bibliographique pour le domaine irano-aryen

Volume 28 | 2007

Comptes rendus des publications de 2005

Pendār-hā-ye yūnānī dar Maṭnavī. Tehrān, Rowzane, 1384/2005, 394 p.

Franklin Lewis

Édition électronique

URL : <http://journals.openedition.org/abstractairanica/20841>

DOI : 10.4000/abstractairanica.20841

ISSN : 1961-960X

Éditeur :

CNRS (UMR 7528 Mondes iraniens et indiens), Éditions de l'IFRI

Édition imprimée

Date de publication : 15 mai 2007

ISSN : 0240-8910

Référence électronique

Franklin Lewis, « Pendār-hā-ye yūnānī dar Maṭnavī. Tehrān, Rowzane, 1384/2005, 394 p. », Abstracta Iranica [En ligne], Volume 28 | 2007, document 338, mis en ligne le 18 septembre 2007, consulté le 25 septembre 2020. URL : <http://journals.openedition.org/abstractairanica/20841> ; DOI : <https://doi.org/10.4000/abstractairanica.20841>

Ce document a été généré automatiquement le 25 septembre 2020.

Tous droits réservés

Pendār-hā-ye yūnānī dar Maṭnavī. Tehrān, Rowzane, 1384/2005, 394 p.

Franklin Lewis

- 1 The underlying premise of this book is that though the two systems of Greek Platonic/ neo-Platonic thought and Islamic mysticism stem from different conceptual bases and arrive at somewhat divergent conclusions, an undeniable similarity (qarābat-e qaṭʿī, 11) exists between Sufi theosophy and the teachings found in Pythagoras, Plato and especially Plotinus. The author briefly reviews the 9th and 20th century theories of the orientalist about the origins of Sufism, and whether or not there are direct lines of transmission to other traditions, but without proposing any new theory or synthesis. Nevertheless, she does insist upon the numerous similarities, particularly as regards the concepts of eros and agape (ʿeṣq and moḥabbat), beauty, the world of forms, the eternity of spirit, etc. The book's comparisons are based on a limited number of Greek primary sources – mostly Plato and Plotinus' Enneads – referenced in Persian translation, rather than the original Greek; these are supplemented by some secondary studies of Greek thought, again translated to Persian (such as Bertrand Russell's A History of Western Philosophy).
- 2 The book's major strength lies not so much in the comparison to Greek neo-Platonism, as in the author's knowledge about Islamic mysticism and the background of Mowlānā Rūmī's thought, and her ability to succinctly and clearly present it, drawing upon relevant passages from the works of Rūmī (most often the Maṭnavī, but also Fīhe mā fīh, his correspondence, and the Dīvān-e kabīr). All in all, it provides one of the better thematic discussions of Rūmī's mystical thought, and will be useful to scholars as well as general readers. However, an index would have been helpful.

INDEX

Thèmes : 11.1.1.1. Littérature persane classique

AUTEURS

FRANKLIN LEWIS

University of Chicago