Negin Nabavi. Readership, the Press and the Public Sphere in the First Constitutional Era

Bianca Devos

Electronic version

URL: <http://journals.openedition.org/abstractairanica/40776>

DOI: 10.4000/abstractairanica.40776

ISSN: 1961-960X

Publisher:

CNRS (UMR 7528 Mondes iraniens et indiens), Éditions de l'IFRI

Printed version

Date of publication: 1 December 2013

ISSN: 0240-8910

Electronic reference

Bianca Devos, « Negin Nabavi. Readership, the Press and the Public Sphere in the First Constitutional Era », Abstracta Iranica [Online], Volume 32-33 | 2013, document 293, Online since 01 July 2016, connection on 27 September 2020. URL : <http://journals.openedition.org/abstractairanica/40776> ; DOI : <https://doi.org/10.4000/abstractairanica.40776>

This text was automatically generated on 27 September 2020.

Tous droits réservés

Negin Nabavi. Readership, the Press and the Public Sphere in the First Constitutional Era

Bianca Devos

REFERENCES

Negin Nabavi. « Readership, the Press and the Public Sphere in the First Constitutional Era », in : Houchang E. Chehabi, Vanessa Martin, eds., Iran's Constitutional Revolution. Popular Politics, Cultural Transformations and Transnational Connections. London, Tauris, 2010, p. 213-223. (Iran and the Persianate World)

- 1 This article outlines changes in the journalistic culture of the constitutional press by comparing the then most influential and popular newspapers: Ḥabl al-Matīn, Şūr-e Esrafīl, Musāvāt and Tarbiyat (the last published by Ḍukā al-Mulk from 1896 till 1907, when he decided to cease publication since the times had changed). Besides the relatively moderate background of the editors of new newspapers, the most noteworthy transformation of the constitutional newspapers was their relation to the readership. Using letters to the editor, the author illustrates the press's intention to change readers from passive subjects into active citizens. He argues that the press played a significant role in laying the building blocks of a nascent public sphere in Iran.

AUTHORS

BIANCA DEVOS

Philipps-Universität, Marburg