- 1 Marek Olbrycht in this short contribution, deals with the Aparnoi, a tribe that by the middle of the 3rd century BC, had gained a predominant position within the Dahae confederation after the migration from Transoxania to the Trans-Caspian steppes. According to Olbrycht, the existence of a kingdom called Abrēnag in the ŠKZ inscription located close to Khorasan during Shapur's rule seems to be connected with the Aparnoi tribe. Also, another place name, Abaršahr, indicating the upper eastern satrapies and therefore including Khorasan itself, seems to be linked with the Aparnoi and the Abrēnag kingdom speaking for a relevant historical role of that tribe throughout the Parthian era and within the Sassanid ruling system.
