

Copyright Transfer Agreement for CeROArt Journal

CeROArt is hosted on the OpenEdition platform, whose licensing policy is based on the Creative Commons 4.0 (CC) License. By default, the platform applies the CC BY-NC-ND 4.0 license to our Journal, issues (or annual sections), and documents it hosts. We adhere to the Diamond Open Access model, a free, community-driven, and non-commercial academic publishing model with no financial barriers for authors and readers. This copyright transfer agreement fully aligns with this non-commercial approach. It is freely inspired by the model defined by ICOM-CC for its online platform.

Title of the document or article: Hereinafter referred to as "the contribution."

Authors (all, LAST NAME, first initial):

This agreement aims to protect the interests of CeROArt as well as those of the authors and their employers while establishing a fair balance between the rights of both parties.

I. Copyright Transfer

a) The undersigned hereby transfers to CeROArt, for the entire duration of the copyright from the date of acceptance of the work for publication, as well as any extension or renewal of that duration, all copyright related to the contribution, including, but not limited to, the right to publish, republish, transmit, distribute, and use the contribution and its materials (including abstracts, tables, graphics, images, etc.), in electronic and printed editions and in derivative works worldwide, in all languages and through all means of expression known today or developed in the future, and to grant licenses or allow others to do so. The undersigned expressly acknowledges and agrees to the inclusion of their name, email address, and institutional affiliations in the registered version of the contribution. The undersigned expressly agrees to the inclusion of the contribution's abstract, if applicable, in the AATA Online bibliographic database and to comply with AATA's general terms and conditions, as amended from time to time.

b) Any reproduction, display, transmission, or other distribution or use of the contribution or any of its elements, on any medium authorized herein, must include the standardized electronic reference as indicated in the online publication, as well as the DOI link, as shown in the example below:

Example in French: Paul Philippot, "Finalement, c'est une question de conscience...", CeROArt [Online], EGG 1 | 2010, published online on December 15, 2010, accessed on February 15, 2025. URL: <http://journals.openedition.org/ceroart/2051>; DOI: <https://doi.org/10.4000/ceroart.2051>

Example in English: Kate Seymour, "Balancing Knowledge and Practice Through Repetition and Reflection", CeROArt [Online], HS | 2014, published online on October 1, 2014, accessed on February 15, 2025. URL: <http://journals.openedition.org/ceroart/4238>; DOI: <https://doi.org/10.4000/ceroart.4238>

II. CeROArt Restitutes Rights to the Author(s)

a) The right, free of charge, to photocopy, transmit online, download, print, and distribute a copy of the published contribution, in whole or in part, to a colleague for the personal or professional use of the author, for the advancement of research, academic or scientific studies, or for corporate informational purposes, in accordance with section III.b) below.

b) The right to freely republish, in printed form, all or part of the content of the published contribution in a book written or edited by the author.

c) The right to use a selection of figures, tables, and text excerpts from the published contribution for teaching purposes by the author, or for inclusion in another work by the author, integrated into an edited and published work (in printed or electronic form) by a third party, or for electronic presentation on an internal computer network or an external website of the author or their employer. The abstract may be included in the selected excerpt.

d) The right to include the published contribution in a compilation intended for classroom use ("teaching pack") and distribute it free of charge to students taught by the author, or to store it electronically in institutional repositories and databases ("electronic reserve rooms"), so that students of the author's institution can access it as part of their courses and internal training programs of the author's employer.

e) Any use of the contribution by the author or authors must include a citation of the original publication, in accordance with the electronic reference mentioned at the bottom of the article in the online version (see I.b).

III. Contributions Owned by Employers

a) If the contribution was written by the author as part of their employment (work-for-hire: as an employee or contractual worker), the contribution is the property of the company/employer/institution. The latter must also sign this agreement. In this case, the company/employer/institution hereby assigns to CeROArt, for the entire duration of copyright protection, all copyright on the contribution worldwide, as specified in section I.a).

b) In addition to the rights specified as retained in section I.c) and granted back to the author under sections II.a), II.b), II.c), and II.d), CeROArt hereby reassigns, free of charge, to the company/employer/institution and its subsidiaries the right to reproduce and distribute the published contribution internally in printed or electronic form. The institution may publish the contribution on a publicly accessible website and/or deposit it in open-access repositories and archives with CeROArt's written authorization and full citation of the original publication, as specified in sections I.b) and IV. Commercial use of any version of the archived document is strictly prohibited.

c) The right to include the published contribution in a compilation intended for classroom use ("teaching pack") and to distribute it free of charge to students taught by the author, or to store it electronically in institutional repositories and databases ("electronic reserve rooms"), so that students of the author's institution can access it as part of their courses and internal training programs of the author's employer.

d) Any use of the contribution by the author or authors must include a citation of the original publication, in accordance with the electronic reference mentioned at the bottom of the article in the online version (see I.b).

IV. Copyright Notice

The author and the company/employer/institution agree that any reproduction, whether full or partial, of the contribution, distributed in printed or electronic form, must include the copyright notice consistent with the original publication, as well as a full citation of the publication, as indicated in the online version (see I.b).

V. Author Representations

The author certifies that the contribution is an original work of which they are the creator. If the contribution was prepared jointly, the corresponding author agrees to have this agreement signed by their co-authors. Digital signatures may be used.

The contribution is submitted exclusively to this publication and has not been previously published, except as an interim report, internal report, or in a different language for essays.

If the contribution contains excerpts from works protected by third-party copyrights, the author certifies that they have obtained written permission from the copyright holders for all uses intended within the scope of CeROArt's publication. The author commits to citing sources within the contribution.

The author certifies that the contribution is free from defamatory, obscene, or unlawful statements. It does not infringe on any existing rights related to privacy, copyright, trademarks, or any other intellectual property rights.

VI. Dispute Resolution

This agreement is governed by Belgian law. In the event of a dispute regarding its interpretation, execution, or validity, the parties shall endeavor to reach an amicable resolution.

If no amicable agreement is reached within 30 days from the written notification of the dispute by one of the parties, the matter shall be submitted to the competent courts of Liège, unless otherwise required by law.

Declaration

By signing this document, I hereby transfer the copyright of the aforementioned contribution to CeROArt under the conditions described above and certify that the contribution has not been submitted for publication to another publisher.

All authors [and copyright-holding employers, if applicable] must complete and sign this form.
