Editorial

To
Travail et emploi
's readers and authors

Thomas Amossé, Marie Cartier, Odile Join-Lambert, Thierry Kirat, Sophie Pochic and Véronique Simonnet

Electronic version

URL: <http://journals.openedition.org/travailemloi/6176>

DOI: 10.4000/travailemloi.6176

ISSN: 1775-416X

Publisher

DARES - Ministère du Travail

Printed version

Date of publication: 15 December 2013

Number of pages: 5

ISSN: 0224-4365

Electronic reference

Thomas Amossé, Marie Cartier, Odile Join-Lambert, Thierry Kirat, Sophie Pochic and Véronique Simonnet, « Editorial », Travail et Emploi [Online], Hors-série | 2013, Online since 01 January 2014, connection on 22 September 2020. URL : <http://journals.openedition.org/travailemloi/6176> ; DOI : <https://doi.org/10.4000/travailemloi.6176>

This text was automatically generated on 22 September 2020.

© Direction de l'animation de la recherche, des études et des statistiques (Dares)

Editorial

To
Travail et emploi
's readers and authors

Thomas Amossé, Marie Cartier, Odile Join-Lambert, Thierry Kirat, Sophie Pochic and Véronique Simonnet

- 1 As of 2013, the review Travail et emploi is opening its pages to the English-speaking public with a biennial English translation of articles selected from those published during the two preceding years. Published as a Special Edition, this selection follows the same distribution norms as those for the four issues published annually: available in a "paper edition," it can also be accessed online on several portals: the web site of the review; Revues.org; Cairn-info; and it will soon appear on Jstor.
- 2 This international dimension is an important part of the editorial policy of Travail et emploi, which regularly publishes articles by non-French authors as well as those dealing with countries other than France. However, the publication of this special issue in English marks a new stage in enlarging this orientation. The review is well established in the French academic community and will thus give English-speaking readers an overview of some of the liveliest themes discussed in France while giving authors, especially younger writers, the opportunity of presenting their work to a wider audience.

3 This selection of articles from Travail et emploi

illustrates the diversity of disciplines and the multiplicity of methods used. The eight selected articles are the work of economists, sociologists, political scientists and historians, who rely on statistical analyses, archival research, ethnographic notes and interview studies. They also reflect the originality of the topics covered in the review: from career transformation of gendarmes in the nineteenth century to that of local civil servants in a small town in the contemporary period; from the emergence of the notion of psychosocial risks to its evaluation; from the remarkable good health of the self-employed to the evolution of the social group of crafts workers; from the reconstruction of the concept of union representation to the convergence of salaried careers of men and women over recent decades.

Beyond the diversity of the issues raised and the importance of the results brought to light, this Special Edition reflects the review's orientation towards scientific evaluation which is in line with international norms: always collegial, it is based on an anonymous review of articles by referees outside of the editorial board, and its editorial guidance takes the form of calls for contributions regularly open to the entire scientific community. At the same time we reaffirm our vision of a multidisciplinary approach which does not sacrifice disciplinary specificities and remains open to history and ethnographic sociology, disciplines which utilize a monographic approach, often absent 4 in other social sciences.

In the wake of recent developments in the journal, this English edition –which has been financially and materially supported by the Ministry for Labour and Employment– aims at increasing its ability to attract the most original scientific productions in its field, clarifying their contributions in a demanding dialog with the most recent theoretical and empirical advances at the French as well as at the international level. These are the 5 objectives of

Travail et emploi

which wants to continue occupying a central position in leading the scientific debate on its issues of interest. We hope that readers and authors, both in France and abroad, in French and in English, will rejoice with us in this new publication.

AUTHORS

THOMAS AMOSSÉ

Editor

MARIE CARTIER

Editorial Board Member

ODILE JOIN-LAMBERT

Editorial Board Member

THIERRY KIRAT

Editorial Board Member

SOPHIE POCHIC

Editorial Board Member

VÉRONIQUE SIMONNET

Editorial Board Member